

Countdown To College

Get the skills you need today for college tomorrow

Preparing for college starts early. The more a student knows about how they learn and what they want in a college, the easier it is to prepare. We help students figure out who they are by assessing their strengths and challenges. The decisions they make and the skills students learn during high school will shape them for the rest of their lives. C2C students will learn to:

- Identify learning style, strengths, challenges and their college selection criteria. In addition, students will see what grades and standardized test scores are required for admission to their choice colleges and universities. The relationship between grades and merit scholarships is important to understand. Knowing the facts early in high school allows students time to gain skills and find resources to help them maximize their potential
- Create a detailed plan. Adding extra curricular activities, community service, internships and enrichment courses will increase their admission chances and result in greater scholarship awards.
- Develop their college list and collect information about tuition, associated costs, merit scholarships, and vital information parents want to know. This information is loaded into the UpSkill© template to provide parents with a snapshot of their student's college list, so they may begin to discuss college future and their budget.
- Predict their chances. Students will receive a "Probability Report" for their top 5 schools, detailing the GPA and standardized scores of students already admitted. In addition, they will see the criteria that schools value in the application process, showing them what they need to be competitive, information they need now.
- Write a winning resume. Access resources for internships, community service opportunities and enrichment.
- Identify strategies for navigating college fairs, meeting admissions staff and preparing for college tours.
